

Dr. Yang Zhang at CISPA Helmholtz Center for Information Security is looking for multiple fully-funded Ph.D. students working on machine learning security and privacy.

Yang (<https://yangzhangalmo.github.io/>) is a research group leader at CISPA. Previously, he has been a postdoc working with Michael Backes at CISPA from January 2017 to December 2018. CISPA is located at Saarbruecken, Germany, it is the newest member of the Helmholtz Association, the largest scientific organization in Germany fully committed to scientific excellence and to tackling the grand research challenges in their respective fields. CISPA as Helmholtz's first investment in computer science is one of the top research centers in information security, it is constantly ranked top-3 in the field worldwide, see csranks.org.

Requirements:

- A bachelor/master degree in Computer Science, Information Security, Mathematics with excellent grades
- Excellent English
- Excellent programming skills
- Good knowledge about machine learning

What we offer:

- Full-time working contract (E13 level salary)
- Excellent research environment
- Strong supervision
- World-class collaborations

To apply, please send your

- CV
- Transcripts

to yang.zhang@cispa.saarland